Dr. Ernest W. Lefever, a member of the senior staff of Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C., will be featured speaker at USC's 41st annual Institute of World Affairs Dec. 6 to 9 at the Huntington-Sheraton Hotel of Pasadena.

His topic, "Power and Purpose in World Politics," will be delivered at the evening plenary session opening the institute. Allen W. Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency also will address the delegation.

The Brookings Institution is an independent research agency in Washington which prepares studies for the U.S. government. Dr. Lefever also teaches international politics part-time at the American University in Washington, and is a consultant to the Council on Religion and International Affairs.
